This is Team Falchion

Team Falchion was formed in 2002 to explore and practice medieval sword fighting, with a view to presenting exciting and realistic-looking combat to the public.

From these simple beginnings, the Team has expanded into taking part in re-enactment battles, arena demonstrations, banquet entertainment, archery and competitive tournament participation.

We train with a variety of medieval reproduction weapons, from the basic sword to the more exotic bardiche and the mace.

Our instructors have all had first-hand training from some of the best, and all regularly attend the renowned Cosmeston Knight School.

We pride ourselves on our combat safety, and our reputation of entertaining and chivalrous combat.

Sword Combat is the core of our group.

Living History and Research

But it's not all about fighting. As a group, we encourage our members to learn about medieval crafts, such as armour manufacture at a forge, leatherworking, candlemaking, pottery, cooking and painting.

To support this, we have a small encampment representing an English household of 1340, on military campaign.

Living History Camp at Blenheim Palace

In this household are places for the craftsmen to work, and for the soldiers and other camp personnel to practice or go about their business.

The household is based around a small number of historically researched knights of Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire. The lord being portrayed this year, is Sir Nicholas de Cantilupe of Ilkeston and Greasley (1300-1356), however, other personae are also being researched and created as living enactments.

We pride ourselves on our family-friendly presentations and ability to interact with the public.
